NELSON BARES U. S. AGENCY SHIFTS TODAY

Will Reveal Details of New Streamlined Plan to Cut Red Tape.

NAMED JUST WEEK AGO

War Production Board Head Acts Swiftly, Expected to Name Auto Industry Boss.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Donald M. Nelson announced today he would abolish the office of production management and bring all of its functions and activities under his authority as chairman of the new war production board.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON —War Production Czar Donald M. Nelson today discloses a far-reaching reorganization of governmental agencies to speed up defense procurement and production, just one week after he was chosen by President Roosevelt to lead the nation's industrial forces to victory.

Nelson appeared to face his first press conference as production chief with details for a "streamlined" government organization designed to eliminate much red tape and expedite execution of President Roosevelt's plans for the greatest war production machine in history.

Nelson was expected to place Ernest Kanzler, automobile production expert, in full charge of the automobile industry's war output. Kanzler, president of the Universal Credit corporation and long an associate of Henry Ford, now is head of the office of production management's automotive branch.

It is only a week since President Roosevelt outlined his plans for a war production board headed by Nelson, one-time mail-order house executive, who was director of the OPM's division of priorities.

Nelson was given the "go-ahead" by the president to draft his own bill of goods. He lost no time in going to work and drafted an executive order that gave his powers second only to those of the president. He presented it to Mr. Roosevelt Jan. 15, and the chief

Dr. H. B. Millhoff, chief of the dental division of the Ohio department of health, will address the gathering which will include city and county school heads, and representatives from Parent-Teacher organizations, Red Cross, luncheon clubs, visiting nurses and other county-wide groups.

FLAMING PLUNGE

Witness In Dope Case Killed In Fiery 8-Floor Fall.

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—Dorothy Sullivan, 27, her body a flaming torch, plunged eight floors to her death, 20 hours before she was to testify today as a government witness in the trial of two alleged narcotics peddlers.

Miss Sullivan, whose testimony helped convict Victoria (Vic) Shaw, notorious vice queen, on a narcotics charge last June, was scheduled to testify today against Al J. Robbins and George Neilson, federal narcotics authorities said.

Police said the door to the advertising office from which Miss Sullivan jumped was locked. Inside the room they found an open can of benzine. Two desks were partly burned and a smoldering book of matches lay on the windowsill.

Army Call Arrives 2 Days After 10-Year Sweethearts Get Married

But Newlyweds Take Bad News Like Soldiers

Ten years ago Miss Esther Riter, 254 North Market street, Galion, fell in love with Walter Shryock, 157 Arthur avenue, Mansfield, an army recruit. He was in love with her, too, and for 10 years they went together steadily, building up plans for the day they would marry.

Saturday that day arrived. They stood before the altar of the English Lutheran church in Bowling Green and became man and wife in a double ring ceremony performed by Rev. Walter Charlesworth.

Monday, Shryock received notice from Selective Service board No. 1 in Mansfield to report for military service.

Today he left to join the army.

Both he and his bride took the separation like soldiers.

"Walter's ready to face the music and anything else the enemy can cook up for him, and I guess the best thing I can do is set my jaw and face the facts," she said.

Shryock doesn't feel heroic about it. As he got into his army overcoat he said:

"I'm human, and I'm not trying to kid anybody. Naturally I don't feel very good about going away just now. But this war's a job that's got to be done."

From the way he said that—from the way thousands of other young Americans are saying it, too—you can tell it's a job that WILL be done.

Army life won't be new to Shryock. Last February his number came up at Selective Service board No. 1 in Mansfield. He was 34 and just under the age limit for peacetime selectees at the time. He went first to Camp Grant, Ill., and then to Camp Bowie, Texas, as a private and dental technician in the 64th Medical regiment.

In November he was released among one group of men past the 28-year-age limit and returned to Mansfield

He has been advised that he will rejoin his old regiment.

Attendants at the wedding in Bowling Green, Saturday, were an old friend of the groom, Robert Beck, formerly of Crestline, and Miss Leona Feber, both of Bowling Green.

Last night Shryock's sisters, Mrs. Marion Hetler, 124 Gibson avenue, and Mrs. John Mabee, West Fourth street road, and his aunt, Mrs. Stanley Hout, 143 Arthur avenue, gave a dinner at the Mabee home honoring the bride and groom.

While her husband is serving with the army, Mrs. Shryock will continue her work at the Strathbury Manufacturing company in Galion.

"As long as I know where he is, I'll know exactly how to get there and exactly how far away it is, and I'll go to see him every opportunity I get," she says. "When and if he leaves the United States my heart will be with him as it has been for the last ten years."

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Shryock . . . Army ends honeymoon.

Argentina Reported Set For Rupture With Axis

Rio Conference Sees Indications Nation Will Join Collaboration After Elections In April.

(By International News Service)

RIO DE JANEIRO—The statement of Acting President Ramon S. Castillo that Argentina will refuse to break with the Axis was "wrongly interpreted" an Argentine spokesman announced today, and all indications were that Argentina will collaborate against the Axis after her elections in April.

The spokesman declined to elaborate, but was emphatic in insisting that a wrong interpretation had been placed on Castillo's statement, which brought consternation to the Inter-American conference of foreign ministers assembled here.

Castillo had been quoted in Buenos Aires as saying, in what was termed a "final statement."

"Right or wrong, Argentina will not break off diplomatic relations with Italy, Germany and Japan."

Dr. Enrique Ruiz-Guinazu, Argentine foreign minister, has clearly indicated to the conference that his country is willing to sign the Colombian resolution calling for complete rupture of relations, it was understood.

But this cannot be done, it was said, until the April elections are over and done with. After that, according to reliable information, Argentina is prepared to go the whole way with the rest of the United American nations.

Castillo, who is functioning in the illness and retirement of President Dr. Roberto M. Ortiz, will step down after the elections. The assumption that his successor would collaborate in anti-Axis moves brightened the atmosphere when the conference reassembled in Itamaraty palace this morning.

Capacity House Gets Laugh From 'Washington Slept Here'

By ESTHER SMITH.

A capacity audience which laughed and applauded its way through the second Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman comedy to be presented here this season by the Mansfield Community Players attended the performance of "George Washington Slept Here," at John Simpson auditorium Wednesday night.

Filled with situations which practically every member of the audience had experienced at one time or another, the comedy dealt with the efforts of a city-bred family to restore a dilapidated old Pennsylvania farm house into habitable dwelling.

Louis Meisse's stage set depicting the dank-looking interior strewn with straw, odd pieces of furniture, a plow and other fragments of the years and uses to which the place had been put drew the first hand of the evening. Later the set was transformed into a spot of rustic beauty with the aid of maple furnishings, crisp white curtains on the windows and potted red geraniums to splash the scene with brightness.

The opening curtain introduced the Newton Fuller family, new owners of the house, whose various reactions were anything but similar to say the least.

Fuller, a friendly soft-spoken individual, had purchased the property, without first telling his wife, partially on the premise that the Father of His Country had supposedly slept there.

Mrs. Fuller, an outspoken individual with a love for modern conveniences, didn't share her

Township Trustees Told Only Help County Can Give Will Be Equipment Use.

Richland county road department activities this year will be limited to maintenance work only and some of the county and township roads may get pretty rough before they can be repaired, County Engineer Howard Sword told more than 80 township trustees and clerks at their annual meeting with him last night at the courthouse.

The engineer said the only help the townships can expect from the county will be the use of the county road equipment and the trustees will have to provide the fuel and repairs for it.

Because of the reduced revenue from auto license and gasoline tax sources that is certain to follow the "freezing" of

Dog Population Up, County Sells 500 More Licenses

Either Richland county's dog population is on the increase or dog owners are taking fewer chances of losing their pets to the dog warden, County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe decided today.

The auditor had issued more than 5,200 dog tags when the deadline expired last night, about 500 more than at the corresponding time last year.

The auditor and his staff sold 1,200 tags yesterday as long lines of dog owners filed past desks set up in the courthouse lobby.

Any dogs except small puppies that are permitted to run loose now without tags may be picked up by the dog warden and destroyed if the owners fail to buy tags.

Wolfe expects the total sale of tags this year to exceed last year's figure by "several hundred." He sold 6,200 tags in 1941, most of them during the first few weeks of the year.

"We have been getting more mail orders for tags this year which may account for the earlier purchase of them," the auditor said.

The dog tag money is used to pay the warden, buy tags, and to pay farmers' claims for livestock destroyed or injured by dogs.

SMALL LUZON FORCE RAIDS JAP AIRDROME

Americans, Filipinos Leave 110 Dead In Surprise Guerilla Attack.

ROUT 300 OF ENEMY

MacArthur Army Repels Foe With Savage Fighting In North Batan.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Adopting the classic guerilla tactics of the Spanish-American war, a small band of American-Philippine troops have successfully executed a surprise raid on a Japanese-held airdrome in northern Luzon, forcing the enemy to "flee in confusion leaving 110 dead on the field," the war department announced today.

The guerilla maneuver — described by the department as "brilliant" — occurred at Tugyegarao in Cagayan province at the northeastern end of the island and put 300 of the enemy to rout, with American-Philippine losses described as "very light."

It was the first guerilla warfare to be reported by the war department since the Japanese invaded the islands six weeks ago.

The department said that while this raid was occurring, force in north Batan repelled the Nipponese in "savage fighting."

The Japanese frontal assault in this area, bogged down again when the invaders were driven back after an effort to crash MacArthur's forces at the center.

First successes of the Japanese made by infiltration drives were nullified in the savage fighting, and the Nipponese were forced not only to surrender the ground they had gained in their initial push but also were driven back to the extent that Gen. MacArthur "re-established lines which previously had been penetrated."

The war department described enemy losses in this action as "very heavy." American and Philippine casualties were "relatively moderate," even in the counter-attack which enabled them to retake positions they had occupied before the Jap offensive was launched.

Successes of the American and Filipino defense repelled for a third time Japan's "all out" effort to end resistance in the islands.

Text of the comunique follows:

"Philippine theater: In particularly savage fighting on the Bataan peninsula, American and Philippine troops drove back the

Word Yanks Are Coming Cheers United Nations

A. E. F. Vanguards Already In Action or On Way to Far-Flung Fronts as Japan Claims Advances Under Fire From Seacraft In Malacca Strait.

BULLETIN

TOKYO—(Official Broadcast Recorded By AP)—A Domei war roundup claimed today that Japanese advance detachments were within six miles of the Strait of Johore, water barrier to fortified Singapore, and said large Japanese forces were moving up for direct assault on the British stronghold.

(By Associated Press)

Allied warships were reported shelling Japan's invasion armies swarming down the Malay jungle coast 60 miles north of Singapore today, and the United Nations were further heartened by President Roosevelt's disclosure that "the Yanks are coming!" with A. E. F. vanguards already in action or en route to far-flung battle zones.

An official Tokyo broadcast asserted that Allied warships had entered the critical battle of Singapore even as Japan's navy minister, Vice Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, boasted that the Japanese navy "virtually commands the Pacific from Malaya and the Indies to the west coast of the United States."

On the same exultant note, Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo asserted that Japan planned "increasingly vigorous operations" in the Pacific and would continue fighting until the United States and Britain were "brought to their knees."

Japanese front-line dispatches said battle flags of the rising sun were advancing southward along the Malayan west coast "in spite of gunfire from enemy ships" in the Strait of Malacca, which lies between the Malay peninsula and the Dutch East Indies island of Sumatra.

British military quarters conceded that Japanese troops—apparently arriving in small boats which hugged the shore—continued to land along the Malay coast during the past 24 hours, striking ahead of the main Japanese invasion army to harass the British west flank.

Strong Japanese pressure also was reported against a British communications highway running southeast from the Muar river sector, 90 miles north of Singapore, where British, Australian and imperial Indian troops were struggling to halt the main Japanese onslaught.

It was in this sector that Tokyo asserted 20,000 British were trapped.

A Tokyo broadcast said Japanese forces yesterday captured Segamat, 95 miles north of Singapore, after a seven-day attack against positions defended by the Australian eighth division and fortified to a depth of 35 miles.

BOAST: Says Japan to Bring U. S., Britain to Their Knees

TOKYO—(Official Broadcast Recorded By AP)—Premier General Hideki Tojo told the diet (parliament) today that Japan, acting in close cooperation with Germany and Italy, planned "increasingly vigorous operations" in the Pacific and would go on fighting until the United States and Britain were "brought to their knees."

"Japan intends to strengthen further her solidarity with her allies in military, diplomatic, economic and various other spheres and to go forward toward the attainment of a common purpose," Tojo declared.

He asserted Japan would "gladly enable the Philippines to enjoy honor and independence" provided the Filipinos showed what he called a genuine willingness to collaborate in achieving common prosperity.

He said no mercy would be shown Australia and the Netherlands East Indies "if they continue their present attitude of resisting Japan."

Earlier Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo told the diet that Japan was "paying close attention" to the Pan American conference at Rio de Janeiro with the South American nations "so long as they are not misled by American machinations."

(Togo's statement was generally regarded as an attempt to influence the South American nations against joining in a declaration severing all relations with the Axis powers.)

Navy Minister Vice Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, reviewing naval operations for the diet, asserted the Japanese navy now "virtually commands the Pacific from Malaya to the United States" and claimed these achievements:

VICTORY: Red Armies Thrust 6 Miles Past Fallen Mozhaisk

(By Associated Press)

Russia celebrated her greatest victory of the war today as the Red armies drove six miles beyond fallen Mozhaisk, 57 miles west of Moscow, in pursuit of Adolf Hitler's battered invaders along the Napoleonic road of retreat to Smolensk.

Simultaneously, a bulletin from Hitler's field headquarters acknowledged that Soviet troops had broken through German lines on the upper Donets river—presumably in the fierce battle for the big Donets river steel city of Kharkov, Russia's "Pittsburgh" in the Ukraine.

The high command asserted, however, that Nazi counter-attacks had thrown the Russians back.

No hint of the defeat on the Moscow front was given the German nation.

While Hitler's winter-scourged armies fell back along the 70-mile-wide "escape corridor" from Mozhaisk, threatened by Russian flanking thrusts on both sides, the Berlin radio broadcast this version of the struggle:

"The German line on the eastern front, reaching from the Sea of Azov to encircled Leningrad, is intact in spite of many and heavy Soviet attacks.

"These attacks resulted in heavy losses being suffered by the Soviets but without achieving the occupation of any important points."

The fall of Mozhaisk, climaxed by bloody street fighting in the glare of burning buildings, was announced in four words by the Russian command: "Our units captured Mozhaisk."

The city, forward anchor of Hitler's winter defense front, had been captured by the Germans

WARSHIPS SHELL JAP INVADERS ON MALAY FRONT

United Nations Cheered By Word Yanks Are on Way To Battle Fronts.

Other fast-breaking developments included:

1. Dutch East Indies — The Dutch high command quoted "reliable reports" that Japanese troops had occupied the entire Minahassa peninsula, northeast arm of Celebes island, but "paid dearly for this conquest."

East of Celebes, 40 Japanese bombers and 20 fighting planes attacked Kavieng, on the Dutch island of New Guinea, and three more raiders bombed the nearby city of Madang. Fifty other Japanese bombers and fighters were spotted flying toward Salamaua, south of Madang. Shortly after noon Salamaua airdrome was attacked.

2. Australia—Strong Japanese air forces were sighted at a number of points in the Bismarck archipelago, which links New Guinea with New Britain on the route to Australia. Defenders of Rabaul, New Britain base, shot down three of 100 Japanese planes which struck there Tuesday.

3. Singapore—Japanese bombers against struck heavily at Britain's $400,000,000 island fortress today but paid a high toll. Twelve of the raiders were officially reported shot down amid prolonger attacks on residential districts. On the basis of 10 per cent as a heavy loss, this would indicate that at least 120 Japanese planes were used in the assault.

4. Burma—Imperial Tokyo headquarters asserted that Japanese forces now striking into British Burma, China's backdoor for war supplies, "annihilated" defense troops in an attack near Commeander, 16 miles northeast of Japanese-occupied Tavoy, in southern Burma.

British headquarters at Rangoon, the Burmese capital, declared that Thai-Japanese forces which struck from the Thailand border yesterday toward the important port of Moulmein in southern Burma had been checked near the frontier town of Myawaddi.

Heavy pressure was evident all along the British imperial line across southern Malaya, with the brunt of the fighting apparently borne by Australians on the left flank only 60 miles above Johore strait.

On the east coast of the peninsula. Japanese patrols penetrated to Endau, about 75 miles from Singapore.

Bombing and fighter planes blasted at the defense forces, seeking to clear paths for foot troops attempting to filter through swamps and jungles to menace British supply lines.

British headquarters in Singapore reported about 50 civilians were killed and 150 wounded in an air raid which caused some damage to military targets and residential areas of Singapore yesterday

United States mosquito boats as well as American-made bombers, however, entered the western Pacific war picture and the vanguards of the new A E F's were en route to far-flung battle lines around the world.

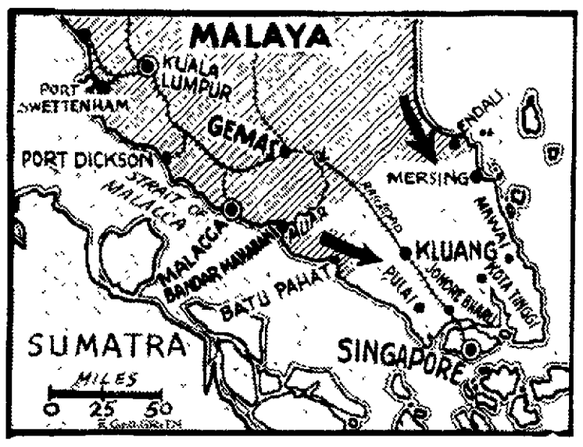
President Roosevelt acknowledged at a press conference yesterday that reinforcements and supplies were moving to the South Pacific and reported excellent progress in the operations.

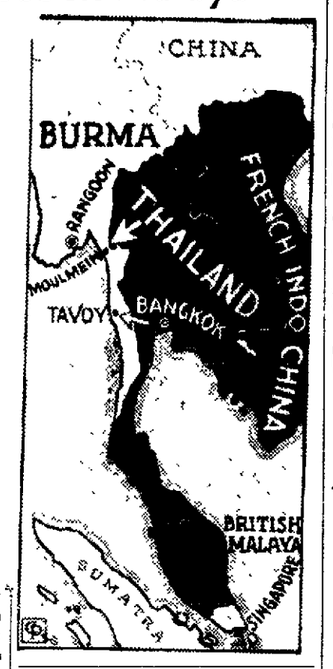
With a total of 41 Japanese vessels reported destroyed by the U. S. army and navy alone since the outbreak of the war, let alone what the British and Dutch have accounted for, Vice Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, Japanese navy minister, told the diet today Japanese naval losses were only four destroyers, four minesweepers, three submarines, four transports and 67 aircraft.

He claimed that 61 enemy warships, ranging upward from gunboats, and 35 merchantmen had been sunk.

That and Japanese forces striking toward the port of Moulmein, in southern Burma, were declared in Rangoon to have been checked by the British near the frontier town of Myawaddi

Where British Suffer Reverses In Malaya





These Central Press maps show where the British have suffered reverses on the Far East front. Above, the Batu Pahat area of Malaya, now bearing the brunt of the main Japanese thrust toward Singapore. The map at right shows Tavoy, Burmese tin center, from which British forces have withdrawn. The cities of Rangoon and Moulmein, which have been repeatedly bombed by the Japanese, are also shown on the map.

London Says Malay Situation Critical

LONDON — (INS) — British military authorities declared today that the situation in Malaya "remains critical" and that menacing Japanese thrusts are developing.

Optimism which recently has crept into British newspapers—largely because of the arrival and activities of Australian forces at the Malayan front—is "not justified," the authorities said.

(Editor's note. A British radio broadcast heard by CBS this morning said it was probable the Japs in Malaya now are meeting greater resistance and that "there has been some check on his landings in western Johore.")

Concede Jap Seizure Of Celebes Area

BATAVIA—(INS)—The Netherlands East Indies high command conceded today that the Japanese are in control of the Minahassa area of Celebes island.

It was disclosed that the Japanese urged parachute troops in their offensive against the Minahassa peninsula.

A new war communique said:

"According to reliable reports the whole of Minahassa—northern arms of Celebes—is at present occupied by the Japanese, who paid dearly for this conquest."

Later in the afternoon five enemy planes circled over Belawan, Port of Medan, for about half an hour and dropped nine bombs on the town, killing three persons and wounding seven but causing little property damage.

Japs Stage New Attack On Islands

MELBOURNE —(INS)— New Japanese bombing attacks against islands in the Bismarck Archipelago were carried out today.

Forty enemy bombers and 20 fighters attacked Kavieng, while three planes bombed Madang northeast of New Guinea and another small force raided the Salamaua airdrome.

Damage and casualties were not reported.

Jap Thrust Held In Burma Area

RANGOON, Burma —(INS)—The thrust of Japanese and Thai troops from Thailand toward Moulmein is "being held" 60 miles northeast of Moulmein by British troops, it was reported today.

The fighting was said to be taking place north of Mywaddi, just across the Burmese border from Thailand.

REDS CELEBRATE AS NAZIS FLEE

Russians Drive Foe Beyond Mozhaisk on Road To Smolensk.

just three months ago in the heyday of their now broken offensive against Moscow—the drive which Hitler proclaimed would be "the last great, decisive battle" of 1941.

In London, Soviet quarters declared that the fall of Mozhaisk would signal a "titanic continuation of the battle" and that the Russian army now had hundreds of thousands of completely fresh reserves ready to hurl into a giant offensive along the entire 1,200-mile front

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said the Germans suffered enormous losses in an attempt to obey Hitler's order to hold Mozhaisk at all costs.

Tass said Red army troops, storming into the city after smashing earth-and-timber forts 50 to 100 yards apart found a scene of chaotic destruction and carnage.

"The whole defense belt was dug with huge craters and littered with German bodies . . . Soviet foot soldiers moved relentlessly toward the center of the town, driving out or killing automatic riflemen in their hideouts . . . The dead piled up in cellars attics and stairways and spilled through doorways."

Mozhaisk was taken by Red army troops under Lieut.-Gen Leonid Govorov.

"The Germans already have been driven back another six miles from Mozhaisk, which they occupied exactly three months ago," the general was quoted by the Moscow radio today.

Rzhev, a railroad center on the upper Volga 125 miles northwest of Moscow, is now the closest to the capital of Russian towns of consequence held by the Germans and it has been outflanked from the north.

Further Russian gains also were reported to the north.

These were the recapture of Ostashkon, on Lake Seliger about half way between Moscow and Leningrad, and the occupation of the large town of "N"—perhaps the railroad city of Nadvoltay—after heavy fighting on the Karelian front in which 500 of the defenders were killed.

British bombers raided the German port of Emden last night and the London air ministry said they started many large fires Four planes failed to return

DNB, the German news agency, said residential quarters in Emden were attacked.

Report 3,000 Nazis Left On Battlefield

NEW YORK—(INS)—More than 3,000 German officers and men were left on the field of action when Nazi forces were routed at Vereya, 20 miles south of Mozhaisk, BBC reported today, according to CBS

Large quantities of guns, machine-guns and trench mortars also were abandoned, the broadcast said.

husband's enthusiasm for the country, particularly when she learned that there was no water on the land other than in the brook. Madge, the young daughter, however, thought the place could probably be "fixed up."

The "fixing up" process motivated the play for three acts to the hilarious enjoyment of the audience until the whole restoration process collapsed from the sheer want of money to pay the second installment of the mortgage and for damage caused by a violent windstorm.

New faces were among the cast last night including Mrs. Joy Herbert, whose good comedy timing successfully carried the punch lines of the play which the authors have given to "Annabelle Fuller," wife of the country-loving Newton.

Rev. Glenn F. Lewis, pastor of Grace Episcopal church, J. Reynolds Hodgson, manager of the Mansfield-Leland hotel, and Mrs. E. M. Olin and Conner Faye, a Mansfield Junior high school student, were among the other new players.

Connor Faye proved he is a real trouper. He did an excellent job as a bratty youngster, and won hearty applause from the audience. Few knew that he had been suffering from a severe cold and had been running a high temperature, but carried off his end of the performance like a veteran.

Lewis lent interest to the production in the role of "Steve Eldridge," the juvenile lead, opposite Miss Patricia Palmer, who played "Madge," the pretty daughter of the Fuller family.

Hodgson's part was that of "Uncle Stanley." Fuller 's well turned-out and presumably wealthy uncle whose finances had actually evaporated but who maintained a "front" in order to retain a home with his nieces and nephews. Hodgson played his role with evident enjoyment

Mrs. Olin was cast as a friendly neighbor of the Fuller family.

The major role of the play, that of "Newton Fuller," was carried by Atty. Herbert Schettler, a favorite with local audiences, who has carried the leads in numerous other productions. Schettler made the character of "Fuller," a sincere and convincing person.

Herman Clingan drew the other choice role, that of "Mr. Kimber," the tobacco-chewing, laconic caretaker whose commentaries in general were delivered with a natural sense of humor that lent a great deal of color to his performance.

Mrs E. K. Bacon, who directed, is to be credited with much of the success of the performance.

Players in other roles included Miss Sylvia Frankel and Ruhland Isaly, as actors from a summer theater; Richard Smith, as "Mr. Prescott," another neighbor of the Fuller family; Mrs Lester Bauer, "Katie," the cook; Evelyn Goldman, "Hester," the maid, and Mrs. Eleanor Hattman, Martha Hartman, William Flinn and Albert Rosencranz as young houseguests at the Fuller home.

An orchestra, directed by Lawrence Todd, added to the pleasure of the evening.

Members of the production staff included: make-up, Herbert Schettler; Louise Meise, technical director, costumes, Mrs. Louise Meisse; properties, Martha and Barbar Hartman, technical staff, Jane Bacon, Ed Smith, Jack Shafer, Chris Hughes, Vernon Crabb and Joe MacLean, business manager, Harvey Bailey.

car sales and the tire rationing program, all construction and reconstruction of roads will be out of the question, Sword said.

"The public might as well get used to some hardships and doing without things now," he said, adding that it will be difficult to keep the roads in tip-top shape this spring if the freezing and thawing causes serious damage.

Defense priorities are making it almost impossible to obtain parts for road machinery and that alone may hold up road work this year, Sword pointed out "We will keep up the roads to the best of our ability as long as parts and equipment are available," he said.

If the war department officials ask that certain roads in the county be improved to handle an additional traffic burden, some of the county road money will be used for that purpose, leaving less for a general program, the engineer explained.

The other speaker at the trustees' meeting last night was Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, chairman of the Civilian Defense program in Mansfield, who outlined the objectives of the program.

The war production board met yesterday for the first time since its creation. Its members were the same as those who sat at the conference table under the old supply, priorities and allocations board, which was abolished by the executive order, but at its head was a new chairman, Nelson, former SPAB executive direct.

The meeting broke up in one hour, 35 minutes, and later the order was issued stopping all production of passenger automobiles and light trucks Feb. 1, with a provision that manufacturers who are unable to shut down assembly lines by the deadline can apply for permission to continue operations until Feb. 10 to complete their January quotas.

The January passenger automobile quota is 204,848, light trucks, 24,169, not counting those for the army and navy, certain government agencies and lend-lease. Mosquito Boat Pilot Torpedoes Jap Ship

WASHINGTON —(AP)— For a daring exploit brilliantly accomplished, the navy wrote a new name on the roll of its war heroes today and added one more ship to Japanese losses for the Philippines invasion.

The name belonged to 30-year-old Lieutenant John D. Bulkeley of Long Island City, New York, who rocketed a swift motor torpedo boat into enemy-held Binanga bay and torpedoed a 5,000-ton Japanese vessel, despite a storm of enemy fire.

Thus did the navy's new "P. T." boat make its spectacular debut in the Pacific war theater and the action undoubtedly heralded many similar attacks in the future.

The nocturnal assault, suggesting anew the steadily wider operations of Admiral Thomas S. Hart's Far Eastern command, was reported by the navy department in a communique last night which said that Bulkeley "has been commended for executing his commission successfully."

Bulkeley had eight seamen, as yet unidentified, in his crew, but the matter-of-fact navy statement hardly hints at the nerve-racking peril of their mad dash. It reports merely that "this small boat carried out its difficult task while under fire of machine guns and three-inch shore batteries."

The greatest protection the men had was the speed of their powerful craft, whose 4,200 horsepower engine is capable of producing a maximum of about 70 knots, or 84 miles an hour.

Besides speed, there was the element of surprise in the night. Binanga bay, tucked away inside Subic bay on Luzon island, is far from any known base of Allied operations in the Far East.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 21, 1942.

Chemically, a man's value is placed at 85 cents—but he isn't taxed on that basis.

The younger generation finds it difficult to believe that older folks can remember when there were no automobiles or radios.

Word comes that Donald Nelson is putting in from twelve to eighteen hours a day on his new job—and isn't asking anyone else to do more than he is willing to do.

What Will Follow Graduation?

THIS is an important week in the lives of almost one hundred Mansfield young people who will be graduated Friday evening from Senior high school.

These young men and women, who have already listened to an inspirational baccalaureate sermon, will hear a commencement address Friday evening and each will be presented with a diploma evidencing satisfactory completion of twelve years of school work.

Then will come—WHAT?

This is something that is pondered by each successive group of graduates as they face a considerable change from the way of life to which they had been accustomed since early childhood.

Except for the assuredness of preparation to take advantage of opportunities that lie ahead of them, there is little basis for prediction of the future that awaits these graduates—just as it was impossible, in earlier years, to look ahead to the successes and failures of the 18-year-olds who were being graduated from high school in those years.

The immediate outlook is not pleasant. These boys and girls are being graduated into a world at war, with their own country deeply involved in the conflict, and the year ahead one of uncertainty for everybody.

But of one thing there can be a feeling of assurance—that the America now in a state of transition is destined to emerge from war as a greater and better nation than it has ever been in the past—and that upon these graduates and their generation will rest much of the responsibility for making it so.

Some of those who are now being graduated must prepare to perform such great tasks as now devolve on leaders in statecraft, industry, business, the professions, and many other fields of human endeavor. Others must fit themselves to perform creditably in vocations they may choose or that may open to them—each realizing that all productive work is necessary and honorable.

The formulas for success and failure are so simple that no young person of high school graduation age need let them escape notice.

More Using Public Transportation

TREND toward using public conveyances instead of private cars is becoming noticeable in a number of Ohio cities as realization is beginning to creep on more people that "a mile saved is a mile earned" in the lifetime of tires that cannot be replaced.

Aside from the economy effected by reduced use of the family car, the impression is becoming more general that it will be wise to keep car and tires in usable condition as long as possible, for necessary travel, instead of running up non-essential mileage.

The reduced quota of tires and tubes to be available in Richland county in February gives an idea of strict rationing that will be necessary. Many special groups and thousands of individuals think that exceptions should be made in their particular cases but there has thus far been no indication of intent to broaden the field of eligibility in the purchase of new tires.

With street car service abolished in Mansfield several years ago and the city's public transportation system confined to buses, there is likelihood that less use of private cars will add materially to bus travel and it will be important to have this service maintained in matters of adequate capacity, routing, regularity and frequency of crips, to greater extent than has heretofore been deemed necessary.

In the monthly report of Mansfield business, just issued by the Chamber of Commerce, the number of bus passengers in December showed a gain of almost 11 per cent over the preceding December, total for the month having been 198,702—and this was before many people had become seriously impressed by stoppage of new tire sales.

Law Observance Is Patriotic Duty

WHATEVER tolerance may have been advisable toward drunken drivers, and other liquor-created hazards and nuisances, under less rigid peacetime discipline, the serious business of war makes it advisable to clamp down on habitual law violators to the extent of making them understand that voluntary law observance is expected of everybody during the time that the limit of public effort must be devoted to winning the war.

Municipal Judge Kalbfleisch is to be commended for the severity of penalty imposed on an intoxicated motorist who was responsible for a three-car crash a few nights ago. Suspension of driver's license for a year and requirement that the offender pay for repair of damage to cars, and doctors' bills and hospital care of persons injured, are also justified obligations imposed by the court in granting suspension of a part of the fine.

Attitude of the city administration in ignoring the city ordinance which fixes 1 a. m. as the closing time for night clubs and other liquor sales places (midnight on Saturday), places on patrolmen the burden of policing drunks, and being on guard against auto accidents caused by intoxicated drivers, further into the night than would be required if police officers were permitted to enforce the law—as was done under the preceding city administration.

It is the announced intent of the national association of liquor dealers to co-operate in urging individual units of the business to conform to the laws of their community—but it is also a responsibility of the city administration, through its police department, to enforce laws that are not voluntarily obeyed.

Census bureau discloses: "If all the cigars made in the United States in a year were rolled into one mammoth stogie it would reach 630 miles, from Chicago to Topeka"—but why bother?

With Japan's emperor designated as the Son of Heaven and Hitler referred to as a son of Mohammed, it may appear that ideas of their ancestry can be left to individual preference.

Chaos In Overcrowded Capital

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

SUPPOSE, Dear Reader, that the town you live in were to have its population unexpectedly just about doubled in the course of only a few months.

It's a growth which, if gradual and spread over a considerable number of years, your community no doubt would assimilate naturally. But I'm not speaking of a mere growth. I'm referring to a multiplication, almost as fast as you can say, "Two times two," only running into a lot higher figures.

The burg wouldn't be able to build at a rate sufficient to put residential or business roofs over so rapidly increasing a swarm, or anywhere near it, would it? It couldn't even throw up frame shacks in short enough order, not to mention comfortable accommodations.

It doesn't take long to nail an ordinary woodshed together, but a woodshed three or four stories high and a city block in area is quite an ambitious undertaking. A matter of simply one of them wouldn't begin to fill the bill, either. They'd be needed in dozens and dozens of acres, and the job of keeping them in repair would call for a sizable army of carpenters.

Your town's police force would by swamped, of course.

Mumps and measles would break out too fast for your public health service to deal with them, and you'd be scared to death for fear of still worse epidemics, in such a state of confusion and congestion.

Naturally, your urban and suburban transportation systems would be hopelessly snowed under.

That's Washington.

That's the fix that Washington, D. C., finds itself in today.

In one respect it's a meaner problem than your town's would be in a similar situation. Your municipality's local authorities would be entitled to meet their own chaos to their own best ability. Washington hasn't got any local government. Congress runs it, and congress is too busy with the national emergency to pay much attention to the poor capital's miseries.

A congressional committee has been discussing them, it's true.

Some of the facts have been revealed, but what good does that do, with no measures adopted in the direction of relieving things?

The Washington Housing association's testified to instances of a dozen or more persons living in one room and of half-a-dozen-room-houses, occupied by half a dozen families.

Health Officer Ruhland's warned of the danger of a wholesale outbreak of contagious diseases, and with no hospital accommodations for the patients, if epidemics do start.

President Roosevelt, to be sure, has ordered a goodly number of our federal agencies scattered from Washington to other cities throughout the country, but the order's being fought like fury by congressmen, who insist that scattering will reduce their efficiency. Besides, new emergency agencies are being concentrated in the District faster than the scatterees are being scattered.

Situation Dangerous.

It isn't alone that the jam's uncomfortable.

It's referred to by competent critics as dangerous at a key point like the capital city—as calculated to hamper our wartime effort. Indeed, I've heard the statement made that it's as bad as an aviation bombing by the enemy would be—that we're relieving them of the bother of bombing us by bombing ourselves right here in the District, by confusing ourselves worse than bombers could do it.

Listen World!

Not Heroic to Be Stoic

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

SOMEBODY—I don't know who—wrote a whole creed in seven words—

"It's not heroic to be a stoic."

A queer creed, that, to many of the older generation. For stoicism, or its more pious form of resignation, was held to be a supreme virtue. And still is. If there was some dark mystery you couldn't understand, some cruel evil you couldn't cure, you decided it was "the will of God" and let it go at that.

Indeed, to doubt was heresy—to rebel was blasphemy. Both punishable, once, by torture and death. Punishable yet, even in our modern civilization, with sneers and jeers.

And the reason, of course, is plain. It's really much easier for lazy, cowardly, conceited human nature to be resigned than it is to try to cure it. People who cure things challange everyone's complacency—disturb everyone's comfort.

Also, they take frightful chances with their own safety and reputation. And if you want to remain a hero in the public eye, you've got to take chances with them.

Yet, from cave days down, no good thing was ever achieved by Stand-Patters, and every triumph over the Powers of Darkness has been won by discontented citizens who believe they were being done dirt and decided to remedy matters. And there's actually no fouler blasphemy than to say that ignorance and fear, poverty and pain are "the will of God."

The Plague—you shudder, today, as you read of the ghastly havoc it wrought in the Middle Ages. Whole communities wiped out in a night . . . narrow streets piled high with rotting bodies.

Yes, you thank God, today, that science has found a way to stop such ills. But you didn't go around thanking God for science when the plague was at its height. You bowed to God's will like a good Christian—or were boiled in oil for your heresy.

What's YOUR private opinion of Hot Heads who aren't content to leave things as they are?

"It's not heroic
To be a Stoic."

But it's still your best bet if you want to be popular!

Find OPM Power Division Is Nest Of Dollar-a-Year Utility Officials

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON — The hard-hitting Truman committee hasn't got around to the matter yet, but some hot sensations are in store when the committee digs into the dollar-a-year-man handling of the power phases of the war production program.

For years one of the hottest issues in Washington has been the Power Lobby. It has been repeatedly investigated, and several years ago, after fierce legislative battles, the Federal Power and Holding company laws were enacted to curb the lobby.

The Truman committee has confidential information that today this lobby is more powerfully entrenched in the capital than ever before.

For months, it has been operating directly inside the government, formulating and running the power policy of the OPM, which was until last week the key war production agency.

The OPM Power division is not only manned with utility officials, but they are still on the payrolls of private power companies. In other words, while presumably working for the government, they are actually paid employes of the utilities.

After being deluged with complaints that the utility-ruled OPM Power division was secretly aiding independent rural power co-ops, the house appropriations committee questioned J. A. Krug, head of the division, on these charges.

Krug defended his staff, but the committee, unconvinced, ordered him to submit a detailed report on his dollar-a-year assistants, including the amount of salaries they are drawing from utility companies while working for the government.

Two months have elapsed since Krug promised to produce this important information and so far he has not done so.

All the committee has received was a cagey letter from John Lord O'Brian, former corporation attorney who is OPM general counsel, giving a list of the Power Division's personnel, but has nothing about their private salaries. However, the little information O'Brian did disclose speaks volumes.

It shows that no less than 18 key officials in Krug's division are dollar-a-year and "WOC" (without compensation) men, who are still on private utility payrolls.

Note: Appropriation committee members estimate that the total pay these men draw from power companies is more than $250,000 a year. War Production Chief Donald Nelson has privately indicated he will houseclean Krug's unit.

Capital Notes.

WHEN Senator Theodore (The Man) Bilbo of Mississippi is looking for his Negro chauffeur, Claude Sullivan, the first place he calls is the White House kitchen, where Claude's wife works. "That boy," says Bilbo, "eats more meals in the White House than the president." . . . When the president delivered his historic message to congress, an appropriations committee clerk rushed up to a house doorkeeper asking the whereabouts of publicity-wise Representative Jennings Randolph of West Virginia. "I've got to get him right away," said the clerk. "He's not on the Democratic side." Look on the Republican side," suggested the doorkeeper. "That's where the newsreel cameras are focused." Sure enough, Randolph was seated within camera range on the GOP side.

Langer's Fate.

THE FATE of Senator William Langer, recommended for expulsion by the senate elections committee, depends on one thing:

Whether the senate decides it takes a two-thirds or only a majority vote to oust him.

If the verdict is a majority vote, then the stocky, cigar-chewing North Dakotan's goose is cooked. If it's two-thirds, then he is probably safe.

A secret poll showed a definite majority of the chamber agreeing with the elections committee that Langer is unfit to sit in the senate. But there are enough doubtful senators to make the outcome of the contest uncertain if it is decided that a two-thirds vote is necessary to unseat him.

Actually, Langer's fate will be decided by a majority vote, because the senate's stand on which rule applies will be decided by such a count.

Langer contends that since he was seated when he presented his credentials last year, it requires a two-thirds ballot to oust him. The opposition denies this, pointing out that he was sealed "without prejudice." It is contended this means that the senate expressly left open the door for future consideration of his eligibility and that his status, therefore, is the same as a newcomer seeking admittance to the chamber.

This argument will be settled by the senate by a majority vote, so that this vote, in effect, actually will determine whether Langer is allowed to remain in the senate or is sent packing.

Father Coughlin Again.

THE PHRASE, Pearl Harbor, has already become the rallying cry of a united America. Public and press have ceased carping and settled down to winning the war—with one notorious exception.

Father Coughlin's "Social Justice," while grudingly admitting the necessity of fighting, continues to snipe at the government, congress, Britain, and Russia.

The December issue published two weeks after the Japanese attack, was packed with passages of hostility. After blaming the bankers and politicians for bringing on the war, the rabble-rousing priest paid a tribute to the Japanese, made a thrust at Hollywood, and printed a poem about youth wallowing in gore.

Hill of Colorado tried to drum up trade for pinto bean growers during his recent visit to Britain. He took with him a large bag of the beans and distributed them among British officials. "I hoped they might include pintos in lend-lease orders," Hill grins, "but the British still prefer their white beans."

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—It may interest you to know that a variation of charades has suddenly become important along Broadway. You see people playing it in restaurants and cafes all along the street. The idea is to suggest the titles of plays, radio shows, movies, battles, or anything topical by using whatever props are available on the dinner table.

For instance, in Frankie & Johnny's last night a girl took a slice of orange out of a cocktail and placed it on a plate. Then she took off her wrist watch and placed it on the orange. That was an easy one. "Watch on the Rhine."

ANOTHER one is to kick the person next to you in the shins. That's "Best Foot Forward." Jay Sims, the deep-voiced newscaster, stuck a match in a catsup bottle, ignited it, then blew it out. That was Helen Hayes' drama, "Candle In the Wind." Just then a solitary diner came in and sat at a table next to the wall. One of the players merely pointed to him, and he at once became "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

Silly? Sure. But it's fun. And like the Turkey Trot of Irving Berlin fame, everybody's doing it.

LATER I was discussing with L. Sims the agony most news commentators and announcers must go through in figuring out pronunciation for some of those unpronouncable foreign names.

"For me," he said, "mid-European and slavic names are the toughest. A twister that gave me more grief than any other was Maloyaroslavets." On the other hand, French, Spanish, Italian, Hawaiian, and Far Eastern names are easy. One reason for this is that Sims is an ex-army man, and was stationed in Hawaii.

IT'S curious the hold Lincoln's name has on foreigners. The latest book on Lincoln is by a Hungarian editor named Stefan Lorant. When he came to America, his little boy asked, "Dad, who is this Lincoln people talk about?" Lorant went to the library to look for a pictorial biography of Lincoln. He couldn't find one. Then he began to build a scrapbook for his son, and as the pictures and sketches grew the idea of a biography in pictures occurred to him. He went to work, and the result has been a collection of pictures of the Emancipator, many previously unpublished, that is being widely discussed. It was published the week before Christmas, and the first copy of the special edition was sent to President Roosevelt. The second went to the Lincoln Memorial College at Harrogate, Tenn. Subsequent copies were presented to Mary Lincoln Beckwith of Washington and Robert Lincoln Beckwith of Chevy Chase, Md., direct descendants of old Abe. They say collectors of first editions were a little put out at not being able to obtain the cherished low numbers.

Father's Hands

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

WHEN I was a very small boy, my father would often lead me by the hand out to the field or into the woods where he was working. I remember well how large his hand would seem — it enveloped mine completely. I marveled at the size of the heavy fingers and the calloused roughness of the thick skinned palm.

When we reached the woods, he set me up on a large flat stump where I could comfortably see about, and watch him saw and split the wood we used for fuel. He gripped the handle of the heavy two-bitted ax or the large one-man saw until the knuckles of each hand were white. I laughed aloud to see sawdust pour from both sides of the narrow groove the saw had made, and watched with awe the power and skill applied to burst apart a twisted knot of wood.

When he would rest at home, sometimes, with hands upon his knees or standing, he would clasp them behind his back, I remember just how they looked—for somehow, even then, they were a symbol of all our livelihood and comfort.

But, with all their roughness, sometimes when evening came and I was weary of play, those same hands carried me upstairs to my trundle bed and with gentle finality laid me down to rest and tucked the covers in.

Even on the coldest of early winter mornings, or when working in the snowfilled woods, those hands were gloveless. And when I sat beside him on the high-seated farm wagon and mine were woolen-mittened and still cold, he would clasp them both in one of his and warm them for me.

I saw them scatter seed on the fallowed land, and labor in the harvest. I saw them write, in old time labored script, in a record book—or an occasional letter to some absent member of the family.

I saw the change of time creep over those rugged hands. The winter cold would stiffen them, and the heat give pain. The manly grip lots its strength—my own hands became almost as large as his—often when we walked together he placed his hand in mine.

Then one day he was tired, and I helped him lie down to rest, and while he slept the peaceful breathing stopped. My heart ached as I looked upon his quiet hands and thought of all the good that they had done.

COUNTY BOARD GETS READY FOR CAR RATIONING

Bailey Tells State of Needs Of Mansfield and Richland Government Units.

The tire rationing organizations in Richland county today started preparations for their new duties —rationing automobiles when the ban on sale of new cars is lifted.

James Bailey, chairman of the Mansfield rationing board and county tire coordinator, advised the state defense council of anticipated vehicle needs of the county and city governments during 1942. The city government will need four police cruisers, one passenger car, and three one and a half ton trucks, while the county will need one truck and one passenger car, Bailey said.

Bailey said he would defer any attempt to establish other anticipated car needs of county residents until he receives detailed instructions as to eligibility classifications.

At Ashland, Newton Mansfield, Ashland county coordinator, suggested that residents of that county get in touch with their board and make inquiry as to the desirability of their registering their probable need for a new vehicle during 1942.

Bailey said he would call a session of the county advisory board on tire rationing late this month to break down by townships the February tire quotas announced yesterday. The county's February allocation is 49 tires and 41 tubes for passenger cars, and 79 tires and 137 tubes for trucks and buses.

The February quotas are reduced from January's figures. To date, the Mansfield board has issued certificates authorizing purchase of four tires and two tubes for passenger cars, and 36 tires and 34 tubes for trucks and buses.

Meanwhile, reduced use of private automobiles is being reflected in increased bus travel, it was reported today by G. F. VanTilburg, general superintendent of the Mansfield Rapid Transit, Inc The recent severe cold spell also was a factor in increasing bus travel, he said.

The company's buses carried 198,702 passengers in December, 27,672 more than in November and 22,500 more than December of 1940. Although figures for this month have not yet been tabulated, the increase is continuing, VanTilburg said

He reported the transit company hopes to purchase additional buses, but as yet has not been able to do so. The company's present fleet consists of 21 buses.

Automobile Club Secretary O.K.'s 'Patriotic Speed'

The suggestion by the Ohio State Automobile association that 40 miles an hour is "the patriotic pace" brought enthusiastic agreement today from Frank Beverstock, secretary of the Richland County Automobile club.

The proposal was made at Columbus by Paul J. Gnau of Canton, association president.

"Although 40 miles an hour is my regular speed, there has been no need, up to now, to watch our driving except to drive safely," said Beverstock, "now there is both a patriotic and practical reason for cutting speed.

"It has been the smart thing to 'step on it.' But with the call of patriotism uppermost in our thinking, we must put a self-imposed governor upon our speed and make 40 miles an hour so popular that the driver who flagrantly exceeds it will find himself the object of reproachful looks," Beverstock added.

REVEALS WAY TO RECOVER IRON FROM LOW-GRADE ORE DEPOSITS

(By International News Service)

DETROIT — To an America seeking all vital metals for war production, Henry Ford today offered a new method of recovering iron from the nation's vast deposit of low-grade, unused ore.

Ford research experts disclosed the process produces a more ductile iron which resists corrosion and may prove useful in the new field of powder metallurgy. Also, the resultant metal is believed capable of improving motor car performance

Even as research men emerged with the process after 12 years of effort. Ford engineers prepared to push production of the iron.

"We're beyond the experimental stage now," Ford said in a prepared statement "We're preparing to build a pilot plant at the Rouge, where apparatus developed in our experiments will be reconstructed on a larger scale."

Ford said full-scale operations will follow and the iron produced in the pilot plant will be used in manufacturing

Experimenting on large deposits of poor ore in Michigan's upper peninsula, research men reported success in an electrolysis method of bringing out the iron—a system of electro-plating which requires only cheap electric power for work on an industrial basis.

The resultant iron can be easily pulverized for use in powder metallurgy, it was said. The iron powder can be molded into high-precision gears that require no machining, Ford said.

Do Flexing Exercises To Be Supple

By MME QUI VIVE

Fashion hasn't a ray of hope or a word of cheer for the heavyweight or the emaciated lady. If you're going to get away with those long skirts that fit closely at the hips, you've got to be in form. Why not? Lugging around adipose tissue wears one out. If the bones show, the body is undernourished. Striving for the normal shape is one means of improving the health.

Here are the requirements for the 1942 figure: a tapering waist, a straight back, well-built shoulders, a fairly full chest. The upper portion of the torso should be lifted, showing that beneath the ribs are good working lungs that don't go wheezy when one runs up stairs, that can pull in plenty of air to keep the blood streams hustling to build firm muscles. The fragile, ethereal lady just isn't in it. The smart woman desires to look healthy and capable, able to put her shoulder to any wheel that needs a shoulder for shoving.

When this beauty preacher mentions the word exercise she expects the beauty congregation to arise as one woman and stampede out into the open. Few women are interested. They want to have fine figures, but won't work for them. It is a crying shame.

Women who have faced the fact that muscle workouts are necessary for well being and good appearance, who have gone through their stunts at least once a day will tell you, honestly and truthfully, that when they started the figure moulding game they were not enthusiastic. But as time went on they found that the day did not start right without them, that jacking up circulation and toning tissues are nerve soothers and put ginger in the heels. They do deep breathing, bending, stretching, high kicking, varying the exercises so that they never become tedious.

Deep breathing is the best exercise when one is fatigued. If you suffer from four o'clock-itis, feel all worn out, have lost interest in the evening party that is ahead of you, air wash your lungs for ten minutes.

Here is a flexing exercise that you should try:

Stand with the feet fairly far apart, hands on hips. Stretch tall, bend the body at the line of the hips, keeping the legs rigid. Send the head down as far as it will go comfortably, then lift it, taking a deep breath. As the air trickles into the lungs send the head far back. Return to first position. One deep inhalation, and repeat, sending the head forward and down again.

Fine for chest development and for tightening slack abdominal muscles.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

For the fraction of a second I wondered if Stephen Redfield would decline to talk to me over the telephone. Then my doubt was succeeded by a certainty. People in Philip Veritzen's organization do not refuse suggestions, request or commands from him—not if they wish to stay in the organization.

"Thank you," I heard the impresario say. Then he held out the receiver to me. I took it and spoke with more composure than I felt, for I was positively fluttery inside.

"Mr. Redfield?" I queried.

"Yes, Mrs. Graham." His resonant voice, which to so many matinee fans seems heaven-sent, held a slightly raucous note, and his utterance was jerky and uneven. "What can I do for you? Mr. Veritzen said only that you wished to speak with me."

"I do," I returned, "but not over the telephone. It will take too long for that."

Nerves on Edge.

I distinctly heard the quick catch of his breath, and realized that his nerves were still on edge.

"What did—" he began, and I relieved his vague fears quickly.

"Do you remember that question you asked me last night, the one to which I could give you no answer?" I asked.

It was a sigh of undisguised relief which now came over the telephone.

"Oh, yes," he said eagerly.

"I went over the subject last night, for I hated to disappoint you," I went on, wondering how he would reconcile my present cordiality with my rather shabby treatment of him the night before, "and I recollected something which might be of use to you."

Redfield Pleased.

"Oh, I am delighted," he said. "Where can I see you, and when?"

"I think perhaps I would better come over to your apartment," I said. "Mine has people running in and out."

"I can imagine," he said. "I shall be very glad to have you come over here. When did you want to talk to me?"

"Right away, if I may," I answered, "but of course—"

I paused purposely, and he filled in the gap.

"Would ten minutes do?" he asked uncertainly. "I haven't shaved yet, and—"

"Twenty minutes will do beautifully," I said encouragingly. "I'll be at your door in that time. Goodbye."

Veritzen Angry.

I hung up the receiver just in time to keep Philip Veritzen, a black frown on his face, from taking it out of my hand. That he was in a towering rage I could see, and Olga rose unobtrusively and came toward him with the purpose, I knew, of softening his anger, as she alone can do.

"Did that—that simian dare to ask you to wait twenty minutes?" he said, and his voice was a snarl.

"No, indeed," I said nonchalantly. "That was my idea. He asked only for ten, saying that he had not yet shaved."

His frown vanished and he gave an amused laugh.

"And Steve would die before he'd let any charming woman see him with any trace of a beard," he commented. "But ten minutes! He's one of the quickest men I know. He must want extra minutes to put on some of his famous time-defying make-up."

Olina Offers Help.

My pulses leaped at this proof that Philip Veritzen must know Redfield's real age, but I schooled my voice to composure and apparent carelessness.

"Twenty minutes ought to give him time to disguise himself completely," I said. Then I turned to Olga who, with her hand slipped through her husband's arm, was looking affectionately at me.

"I do wish I could stay longer, Olga dear," I said, "but many things over at the apartment are urgently demanding my attention, and in twenty minutes I can do a good deal."

I had been conscious that Olina's lustrous eyes, so like her mother's, were watching my every movement, as if she wished to speak to me. So I was not surprised when she said hesitantly:

"Could I help you if I went over with you?"

Serve Home Made Sweet Breads Hot

By BETSY NEWMAN

Let's make a sweet roll or bun to eat with stewed or canned fruit for dessert. You can make a sweet bread to be served hot, of course, but the recipes I am giving you can be made early in the day.

Today's Menu.

Broiled Lamb Chops
Creamed Potatoes
Cauliflower with Cheese Sauce
Vegetable Salad Stewed Fruit
Spanish Buns or Swedish Rolls
Tea or Coffee

Spanish Buns.

⅔ cup butter
2 cups sugar
3 eggs
1 Tbsp. cinnamon
1 cup sweet milk
2 tsps baking powder
½ tsp. cloves
2 cups flour

Cream butter, add sugar gradually, creaming it in well, then add eggs. Sift flour, measure and sift again with baking powder, cinnamon and cloves. Add part of milk to creamed mixture, then part of flour, alternating until all are used, adding part of flour last. Bake in shallow tins, and frost when cool.

Swedish Rolls.

1 pint milk, scalded
½ cup butter
¼ cup sugar
¼ tsp salt
1 cake yeast
Whites 2 eggs
7 or 8 cups flour

Make sponge of milk, cooled, eggs, salt, sugar, yeast and part of flour. Place bowl in pan of warm water or in warm place for 3 or 4 hours, then add butter and remainder of flour. Knead, and when it is light roll out about ½ inch thick. Spread with soft butter and a sprinkling of sugar, cinnamon, and, if desired, grated lemon rind and currants. Roll up like jelly roll and cut into pieces an inch wide. When well risen bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 15 or 20 minutes.

Games and contests were diversions of the evening. Prizes were won by Miss Wilma Sauder and Mrs. Whittmer. Luncheon was served at a long table decorated with sweet peas and lighted tapers. The honoree received many gifts from the guests.

TWO FOR ONE

GEARY, Okla.—(AP)—As Ross Squires tells it, he saw a pair of jackrabbit ears scuttling down a crop row in a farm field. He fired one shot and saw two jackrabbits leap into the air and fall dead. He never has figured out where the second jack came from.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

IT REBITS BOTH SUITS

Whenever an expert partner has bid two suits in the natural order, beginning with the higher-ranking, his second bid of the lower-ranking one is really a rebid of both suits. It is his second request to you to choose between them and tells you that both are rebiddable, at least five cards long. If you decide then to raise one of them, please select the higher-ranking one if you have as many cards in it as the lower. Do not choose the lower one, just because that is the one in which he made the rebid.

	♠ Q J 7 ♥ 8 3 ♦ 10 4 ♣ A K 10 8 7 2
♠ K 10 8 4 ♥ Q 6 ♦ 7 6 5 2 ♣ J 9 4	N. W. E. S.	♠ A 9 6 5 3 ♥ J 7 5 4 ♦ K 9 ♣ Q 5
	♠ 2 ♥ A K 10 9 2 ♦ A Q J 8 3 ♣ 6 3

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♦	Pass	5 ♦

That last bid was absolutely wrong. It should have been 4-Hearts, for lots of reasons. First of all, the diamond rebid, practically an absolutely forcing jump, told North to choose between the red suits. But, being the second bid of the lower-ranking secondly bid suit, it showed both of them to be of at least five cards. It meant that South was at least as well prepared for hearts as diamonds, and preferred that suit if his partner held an equal number of both. South might even have had six hearts and five diamonds on that bidding.

The 5-Diamonds got made, although South had to work plenty for it after two leads of spades, but it earned a bad score in the New York Inter-Club League game where the deal was played. At hearts, as it turns out, only four-odd got made, but that produced a score twenty points better. Probably the worst bidding was that where South passed after North's 3-No Trumps call, yet it produced the top score, since ten tricks were taken. But this was pretty crass luck, as South surely should have rebid diamonds before letting it drop there, especially as there might have been slam possibilities revealed by North after South made his next bid of diamonds.

Tomorrow's Problem.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, January 22

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

FAIRLY progressive conditions are read from the predominant planetary rulings. While business, finance, credits and personal contacts with influential personages may prosper, yet there is need for circumspect, tactful and conservative consideration in all relations, as the tendency is toward impulsive, irregular or temperamental moods. This may beget false situations, problems and anxieties.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of conflicting experiences, with some new and important projects under good promise, and with the aid of those in power and position, yet the temperamental, irregular, emotional or variable urges may complicate things. Beware of false or uncertain moves stimulated by irregular, moody or impetuous incitements. Use tact and finesse, not strife and confusion.

A child born on this day should have a variable, temperamental, wayward and contentious spirit, which may create problems, anxiety and emotional disturbance.

POLICE ARREST 1,205 IN CITY DURING YEAR

That's 89 Less Than During 1940 But Value of Stolen Property Increases.

Mansfield police arrested 1,205 persons during 1941 or 89 less than in 1940 but police don't believe that this indicates a decrease in the city's crime rate.

Although fewer thieves and other criminals were caught, they got away with $19,463 worth of property, an increase of $510 over 1940. Police recovered only $1,940 of the loot, leaving the thieves with a profit of about $17,702.

Automobile drivers were not so cautious during 1941 either. They were involved in 1,408 auto accidents, injured 195 persons and killed five more. This represented an increase of 95 accidents, 73 injuries and one death above the record.

All this was disclosed in the annual report submitted by Police Chief M. K. Bates prior to his departure for Washington for training for a Federal Bureau of Investigation post.

Police cited 7,650 persons for traffic violations such as overtime parking or other minor offenses and arrested 252 others for other violations in traffic. The city collected $7,807 in fines for traffic violations.

Eighty-two automobiles valued at $40,101 were stolen during 1941 and police recovered 80 of them. In 1940, police recovered 89 out of 91 cars stolen. Auto thieves stole more expensive cars in 1941, however, taking $40,101 worth as compared to only $33,185 in 1940.

Police towed 153 automobiles parked illegally to downtown garages during 1941, three more than in 1940. Owners of the cars were fined for parking illegally and also paid towing and storage charges.

The fingerprints and photographs of 445 criminals were taken during last year, 84 more than were taken in 1940. Identification officers also fingerprinted 860 other persons, including solicitors, Home Guard members and civilian defens workers.

During 1941, a total of 654 offenses were reported to the police. Eleven cases were found to be false or without base and another 90 were cleared by arrests.

Police arrested 52 persons for larceny, 22 for burglary, 13 for auto theft, 75 for assault, 578 for drunkenness, 60 for disorderly conduct, 36 for driving while intoxicated, 11 for sex offenses, five for embezzlement, three for forgery.

She Sells Stamps

SUES AFTER TRAFFIC CRASH

A Mansfield resident, who was injured when his auto was in collision with a truck at Ontario on Dec. 31, has filed suit in municipal court for $950 damages and has had the truck attached pending a court decision.

Plaintiff in the case is Robert B. Duff, 731 North Diamond street, who is asking a judgment of $950 against Michael Shivey, New York City, and the Continental Van company.

Duff charges that Shivey failed to stop at a stop sign on U. S. route 30-S and was thereby responsible for a collision which wrecked Duff's car and caused him injury. The Diamond street man asks for damages for the car and for personal damages.

THEATERS

Family Story.

The story of a stout-hearted Welsh family and the way they over-came obstacles that seemed unsurmountable is told in the picturization of Richard Llewellyn's novel "How Green Was My Valley," showing at the Ohio. Directed by John Ford, who made "Grapes of Wrath," the production features Donald Crisp as the father, Sara Allgood as the mother and Roddy McDowall the 12-year-old English boy, as the young son of the Morgan family around whom the story revolves. Maureen O'Hara, Walter Pidgeon and Anna Lee are others in the cast.

Absorbing Theme.

Simone Simon, the piquant French star, returns to the screen in "All That Money Can Buy," opening at the Madison today. Based on the Stephen Vincent Benet story, the film deals with a young farmer's bargain with the devil in 1840, and shows how the great Daniel Webster rescued his friend, Edward Arnold, and Walter Huston top the cast with Arnold playing the role of the orator. James Craig and Ann Shirley are also featured. "Outlaws of the Desert," with William Boyd is the second attraction.

Ghost Thriller.

Sparkling Comedy.

Katharine Hepburn plays a spoiled society darling with a genius for getting her own way in "Bringing Up Baby," the sparkling comedy at the Park. She manuevers a romance with a staid zoology professor played by Cary Grant and incidentally makes him guardian of her pet leopard named "Baby." May Robson, Charlie Ruggles, Walter Catlet and Fritz Field are in the cast. Warren William, past master of love and larceny, is featured in "Secrets of the Lone Wolfe," the second film.

Bizarre Plot.

Operating under a new change in policy that calls for a double bill four days each week starting Thursday the Majestic will show "Sealed Lips," with June Clyde and William Gargan as its main feature tomorrow. The management had previously announced a three-day-a-week policy which has been extended to four days. "Sealed Lips," is based on a belief that gained wide credence during the underworld reign of Al Capone. "Dynamite Canyon," with Tom Keene is the second picture on the bill that shows through Friday.

FOOT SOLDIER STILL KEY MAN IN EVERY ARMY

And He's Trained Like Boxer To Cope With Climate As Well as Foe.

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK —(Wide World)— This is the meaning of world war today:

The Russian soldier bundled in layers of wool and fur against cold so bitter that the barrel of his rifle feels like a red-hot poker to the touch; leaving a finger exposed for minutes sometimes means another amputation for an over-worked surgeon.

The fanatic little Japanese, wearing only a singlet, an undershirt and rubber-soled shoes, the sweat cascading from his wiry torso as he snakes his way through the thick Malayan jungle, cradling a tommy gun under one arm and slapping at swarms of mosquitoes with his free hand.

The Australian digger, groping forward through a Libyan sandstorm, the wave of friendly tanks ahead of him only dim shadows and his throat hot as a blow torch as he seeks to get at the enemy with his favorite weapon, the bayonet.

All the other fighting men—the tank gunner, the dive-bomber pilot, the gun-layer on a speeding cruiser—all these play vital supplementary parts in this first true world conflict, but it still is the foot soldier, with a gun in his hand and grenades dangling from his belt, who conquers the terrible conditions on every front and decides the victory.

That is the story hidden deep in most of the dispatches and brought home by first-hand observers. Weight of metal and control of the sky are prerequisite to successful attack, yet they can win a battle conclusively only when the infantry slogging up at the critical stage is tough and determined.

Contrary to widespread opinion, the average foot soldier in this war is a far more finely trained athlete than his counterpart of 1917-18. Not only the suicidal parachute troops and England's case-hardened commandos must have the stamina of mules and the agility of mountains goats to complete their exacting tasks. Any infantryman thrown into modern war of movement needs to be trained like a prize fighter, tuned up to where he can take it and dish it out almost indefinitely.

Paradoxically, motorization of armies has increased the premium of stamina.

The Germans undoubtedly realized this first, and they capitalized on it to the fullest in their violent onslaughts against Poland, the low countries and France. The tanks and the Stukas claimed the headlines, but those of us who had seen regiments of Nazi infantry slap-slapping down Unter Den Linden before Hitler gave the signal carried a vivid picture of the sort of men turned loose to kill and conquer.

As they passed, each one looked so much like every other one that the illusion was startling. Cheekbones stood out starkly under the helmets, the eyes seemed unnaturally bright and each face bore a sort of starved look, like that a boxer in the last days of training. But they were not underfed; they simply had been run and walked and run again until they were fine as fighting cocks.

The lesson was not lost on the nations since bended to destroy militarism, and anywhere now that a German or a Japanese soldier goes looking for trouble he is likely to encounter an enemy as tough, as crafty and as elaborately trained in the art of fighting as he is.

The terrific amount of training now given combat troops before they are considered ready to fight on equal terms and to have a fair chance of survival is considered by military men one of the major developments of this war, ranking with the employment of dive bombers as artillery and the prodigal use of tanks to effct a breakthrough and to silence strong points.

Selassie to Get Throne Back

From London come details of a British-Ethiopian agreement providing for restoration of full sovereignity or Halie Selassie and for assistance to his reclaimed kingdom. It was understood the agreement provides for the use of British officers as advisers for the native Ethiopian army and for the fee Allied use of bases and communications. Haile Selassie, whose kingdom was annexed by Italy in 1936, returned to his native land from exile last year and aided the British in wresting it and the rest of Italian East Africa from the Italians. The picture above was taken at that time.

REPORTS GIVING HELP TO 1,781

Volunteers of America Head Says Meals and Clothing Provided Hundreds.

The Volunteers of America aided 1,781 transients, including 31 families, the past year, according to the annual report of Staff Captain R. L. Guitterman.

Most of the transients, who received 5,504 meals during the year, were sent to the organization by the police department and Red Cross, the captain reports.

Garments, shoes, furniture, food and 6,036 loaves of bread were distributed including 55 Christmas baskets, each costing $6, and 29 grocery orders, each totalling $3. The grocery orders were given to a widow.

The Volunteers sponsored the first Easter egg hunt held in Mansfield and gave 612 toys to children.

Distribution included 1,227 garments; 100 pairs of new shoes; 95 pairs second-hand shoes; 12 beds; 20 comforters, and 103 pieces furniture.

The work of the organization was made possible, Capt. Guitterman said, through the donation of money, furniture, clothing, rags, magazines, metals and papers from Mansfield and Richland county homes.

GEN. JOHNSON: Swing Into 'Food for Victory' Program

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—Too much emphasis is being given to rank and title in this Washington war-production effort.

There is some disposition to think that if a law is passed stating an objective, if general administrative directions are given and above all if the administrator is surrounded with sufficient pomp and panoply of office, the job is done and we can call it a day and set 'em up in the next alley.

Gen. Johnson.

The appointment of Mr. Donald Nelson and the one-man control authorized by executive order is a case in point—especially when considered with Mr. Knudsen's appointment as lieutenant general.

Mr. Nelson's assignment is only a beginning to a difficult if not impossible task. It makes little difference whether he is a cabinet officer or not, or rather it is very wise that he is not. Nothing chews up time or smothers it with boredom more effectively than cabinet meetings.

Mr. Nelson isn't going to have time to be a cabinet officer. Donald has the authority and responsibility and the president's backing. Without them he couldn't even undertake his job. They are all that count with him.

On the other hand, nothing could be more absurd or even fantastic than Mr. Knudsen's military rank. It is being jokingly suggested around here, that if even-handed justice is to be served Sidney Hillman—the other half of the old Knudsen-Hillman two-headed-boy organization monstrosity should be made vice admiral in the navy.

In the old British army, from which we inherited our general form of organization, the commander of an army was a general. Second to him and in direct command of the cavalry was a lieutenant general.

It was the second highest honor to which a soldier could aspire. It came only after a life-time of service spent in acquiring professional military perfection. It was so jealously guarded that, up to our Civil war, only Washington was ever granted that regular rank.

Even Winfield Scott, the conqueror of Mexico had it only by brevet. During the Civil war, Grant, Sherman and Sheridan got three stars. Grant later got four. Up to World War One, only a handful of Civil war veterans were lieutenant generals—among them our Lieutenant General MacArthur's father.

Changed international and military conditions have somewhat liberalized the rule, but they don't change its principle.

Relatively young army and navy officers were advanced so far in grade at Hawaii because the importance of that great force in the Pacific seemed to warrant it, the defense flopped and these officers were promptly and properly broken. SPAB and OPM also flopped to our great disadvantage and Mr Knudsen, a responsible head of OPM is made a lieutenant general. That doesn't make sense.

We need Knudsen—now more than ever—but Knudsen doesn't need to be a lieutenant general any more than Mr. Hillman needs to be an admiral. Bill has a standing and ability regarded with awe in every American factory. That's all he needs. Three stars on his shoulder straps aren't going to add anything to that except perhaps a little ridicule.

BRITISH READY FOR BATTLE ON TYPHUS SPREAD

Local Authorities Plan For Inoculations as Scourge Creeps Over Europe.

(By United Press)

LONDON—Health Minister Ernest Brown announced today that the government had taken special precautions against the spread to the British Isles of Typhus, the war scourge which is creeping through the eastern and southeastern Europe and has reached North Africa.

The war office made it known that it had consulted Russian specialists in London on means to check the spread of typhus.

Brown said that local authorities would be able to effect immediate large scale inoculation whenever advisable.

An official spokesman said today:

"There has been a marked increase of typhus or jail fever on the German side of the Russian front.

"There has been an increase also in southeastern Europe.

"No statistics regarding the number of cases are obtainable. From motives which can be understood German authorities have preferred to keep figures most secret."

A government spokesman had said in the house of commons yesterday that a typhus epidemic which had assumed dangerous proportions in eastern Europe had now reached Spain and that therefore the government was doing all it could to immunize its troops in the Middle East.

Overcrowding and poverty tend to encourage typhus, which is spread by lice. Armies in the field are especially susceptible.

Conditions in Continental Europe were peculiarly favorable to typhus because of general malnutrition, unusual cold and lack of fuel and hot water.

Up and Down THE STREET

All her friends admit Mrs. Edward D. Gibson is an ingenious person. But she was never more so than yesterday. Her husband was driving to Dayton to keep an appointment. Soon after he left, a telephone call arrived saying the person he was going to see would be in Columbus instead of Dayton. Mrs. G. never at a loss, called the highway patrol, and on their advice called the sheriff at Mt. Gilead. She described Ed's car and delivered instructions to be relayed to Ed. The sheriff stopped Ed, gave him his wife's message and Ed was on hand at the proper time for the Columbus conference. He hasn't said yet how he felt when he sheriff's car motioned him to a halt.

The promotion of Police Capt. Thomas M. Bell to the post of police chief and other appointments made to fill the resulting vacancies have thrown the work schedule of the police department into turmoil. Four men besides Bell were affected by the promotions. Officers who have worked on the night shift for several years, suddenly find themselves transferred to work in broad daylight. And Police Lieut. Carl Kalstein can tell you that this is really confusing. Leaving home at the unusual hour yesterday he forgot his keys and was forced to play burglar, using a piece of wire to pick the lock of his own home.

Scrap iron is becoming so valuable that the theft of it is creating a new problem for Sheriff Frank E. Robinson and his deputies. The officers today were investigating a complaint from Forest Mitchell who said the doors and grates were taken from a furnace at his house northeast of Mansfield. The furnace was not in use. The sheriff has investigated a number of other reports recently concerning the theft of junk and automobile parts from second-hand car lots. He has had no recent reports, however, of the theft of tires.

FARM LEADERS FACE PROBLEM OF LABOR CUT

Enlist 137 Ohio Organizations For Drive After Hearing Goble and Bricker.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS — Sobered by the realization that they may have to recruit old men, youths, and even women to aid in their production of "food for victory," Ohio's 300 most prominent agricultural leaders today swung 137 statewide organizations into a full wartime production schedule, designed to produce all the food stuffs necessary to carry the nation to victory.

The "food for victory" campaign is being launched along lines mapped out at a conference called by the Ohio Farm Defense Institute in the historic state capital chamber of the house of representatives.

Following the theme outlined by Governor Bricker when he said that "peak production of food and clothing is vitally necessary if this country and the Allies are to win the war," they returned to their daily tasks determined to do their part to aid in the eventual victory.

They were deeply impressed by the statements of Lt. Col. Chester W. Goble, chief of selective service in Ohio. Although promising them an adequate supply of farm labor in their campaign to feed the men who man the guns, he warned that the "attitude of liberality" heretofore shown by local draft boards no longer would be continued, and that claims of agricultural deferment would be carefully scrutinized. He warned that the farmers would have to look elsewhere for a majority of their unskilled and semi-skilled laborers.

"Deferments are for the convenience of the government, not the registrant, he said. "Exemptions will be only to those of the highest skills, and the greatest urgency, in actual food or war production."

Colonel Goble took cognizance of the present scarcity of farm labor, but declared that it was only a harbinger of what was to come. He said that persons other than young men of military age would have to be trained in agricultural pursuits.

Elmer F. Kruse, chief of the AAA in Ohio, outlined the activities of the Ohio USDA (United States Department of Agriculture) war board to the delegates.

The war boards were established, he said, to co-ordinate education and farm production so that the great increase in foodstuffs asked by federal authorities not only would be forthcoming, but to insure the supply without draining all the fertility out of the soil.

He outlined the three-point program of the war boards briefly: to keep up the morale of our own people; to feed an ever-increasing armed force, and to build a stockpile of food "that will enable us to write a lasting peace."

"Food for freedom can be produced without ruining our land if we will use sound farming practices that build and conserve our soil," he stated.

COURT MARTIAL FREES OFFICER

Col. Muhlenberg Declared Innocent of Criticizing Plane Distribution.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Col. H. C. Kress Muhlenberg was found innocent today at a general court martial of charges that he wrongly criticized distribution of combat planes outside of the United States and its insular possessions.

After 49 minutes of deliberation, the court martial called Colonel Muhlenberg, retiring air corps officer and Court President Col. Edgar A. Fry announced:

"The court finds you not guilty on all charges and specifications."

The gray-haired, 55-year-old officer was charged with violating two articles of war after a public speech here Dec. 17.

This veteran of 38 years in the army was the first high-ranking officer to be called by the army before a court martial since the United States declared war on the Axis powers.

The court's decision now goes to Maj. Gen. Daniel Van Voorhis of the Fifth corps area for review, then to the war department in Washington for confirmation.

Col. Muhlenberg, top ranking command pilot who once was in charge of Hickam Field, Hawaii, was accused of wrongly discussing distribution of warplanes to Axis foes under the lease-lend act and of public political discussions in violation of war department orders. He denied the charges.

BODY OF CAROLE LOMBARD NOW IN HOLLYWOOD, RITES THURSDAY

HOLLYWOOD — The crushed body of Carole Lombard, top flight screen star who met death with 21 other occupants of a TWA plane which crashed in flames on a Nevada mountain peak, was brought to Hollywood today for funeral and burial services.

Clark Gable, actor-husband of the film favorite, accompanied the body back to the film city.

The funeral cortege left Las Vegas, Nev., last night shortly after the bodies of Miss Lombard's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Knight Peters, and Otto Winkler, publicity agent, who also perished in the disaster, were identified and a brief inquest was conducted.

Joint funeral services for Miss Lombard and her mother will be held tomorrow at Forest Lawn Memorial park, Glendale. Studio spokesmen said that simplicity will be the keynote of the final rites with only some two score close friends in attendance.

In the meantime it was announced that the government's official inquiry into the tragedy will open in Los Angeles Friday morning.

A separate investigation was to be launched in Las Vegas by a congressional air disaster investigating committee. Because 15 air corps officers and men lost their lives in the tragedy, a "routine army inquiry" also will be conducted.

Authorities spiked reports that sabotage might have been responsible for the crash, officials advancing the opinion that "an error in route computation" might have been the cause.

He'd Like to Be A Hero, Dies as Murderer Tonight

COLUMBUS — (U.P.) — Wayne Thompson, who "wouldn't mind dying a hero's death like that fellow Kelly out in Hawaii," will die a murderer's death tonight in the electric chair.

Gov. John W. Bricker yesterday refused to grant clemency to the 24-year-old truck driver who "went from bad to worse without moral restraint" on the ground that "no mitigating circumstances" could be found to warrant a commutation of sentence.

Thompson was convicted of killing Carl Hoover, 33, Columbus grocery store manager, during a holdup last April 22. He did not get a penny from the robbery.

Mansfield Tygers Swamp Sandusky Blue Streaks 47-26

Sport Podge by REX HESS

Worry, worry, worry.

Holding top position in the worry league are those quaint characters, the niblick swingers.

You'd think that after a summer of worrying over scores and averages, hooks and slices, dubbed approaches and missed putts, and how long the little woman would hold supper after the sun went down, that the News-Journal league golfers would suspend their worries for the winter and give the bowlers a chance.

But if you think that, you don't know your golfers.

This time you can't blame the golfers. Their mid-winter worries are piling up rapidly and they're all legitimate, and have nothing to do with whether the 19th hole will go dry before they find their way out of the rough.

The News-Journal A-leaguers and B-leaguers are worrying right now about who will be present at tee-time next mid-May, and who will be left for the last shakey putt on the 19th green come next September.

* * *

The way the boys are shouldering their caddy bags and marching off to the armed forces really gives the rest of their A and B league playmates something to worry about these wintry days.

The par-shooting A-league, composed generally of a younger set of golfers, has the biggest share of the worry right now.

Since the close of last season the A-league has lost seven golfers, and is ready to lose the eighth as John Carr has made application for ground crew duty in the army air corps.

Two No. 1 men, Vin Tipul and Rollie Rachel, left for army service last Thursday. Already in uniform are three No. 2 men, Lawrence Deley, Johnny Kleshinski, and Art Van Auker, while the league has lost a pair of No. 4 men, Chuck Schegel and Don Doty, killed recently in an automobile accident while returning to camp.

This will come close to winding up the A-league losses, however, as there are few army eligibles left in the league roster.

Thus far the B-league has lost only one regular, Merle Spurgeon No. 1 man for the Moose, and one sub, Scott Penrod.

And only half-a-dozen eligibles remain among the league's club swingers. So the B-league doesn't have much to worry about. There were a flock of golfers around last fall who were clamoring for admission to the league.

If the two leagues could get together on a slight change of stroke limits perhaps it would solve the problem. The only difficulty is the B-league is such a darn good league, its members don't want to move up.

* * *

Now wouldn't it be funny if the government decided that Irish McGee, operator of the league playground at Possum Run, could serve his country better by continuing to work in an airplane plant than running a golf course, and should keep him out in California?

That would be something to worry about.

Crestline Trips Galion Cagers

GALION—Crestline high school cagers romped over Galion varsity basketball team on the Junior high court last night, 41 to 24.

Dick Rombke, visiting forward, scored 25 points alone, more than the total points of Galion's entire team.

The preliminary game between the Crestline Reserves and Galion Junior Varsity was won by Galion, 24 to 22, in an exciting battle.

Plymouth Defeats Greenwich, 34-23

GREENWICH—Plymouth high school cagers maintained their position as second in the Twin Valley league last night by dropping Greenwich, 34-23.

Dick Rule with 12 points and Joe Moore with eight led the winning team.

Greenwich won the reserve game, 21-13.

College Troubles Increase

Ohio Conference Studies Problem at Mansfield.

By JAMES EMERSON

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—The venerable Ohio conference today pondered a major crisis in future athletic competition brought on by the second World war of its 40-year existence.

The 20-school league, like other sponsors of sports competition, would like to "carry on," even on a restricted basis, during the wartime years but each week seems to bring new and unforeseen obstacles.

Latest headache of the conference athletic heads is the telescoping of curricula and academic years by most of the member schools. Fulfillment of the entire spring sports schedule appears threatened by the fact that many schools are planning commencements one week to a month ahead of previously arranged dates.

Kenyon already has announced it cannot act as host to the annual conference tennis meet on May 23 inasmuch as the Gambier institution will hold spring graduation exercises on May 11 instead of early in June.

The annual conference track meet, familiarly known as the Big Six meet, slated for May 22-23 at Oberlin, is threatened because Oberlin has moved final examinations ahead to that week.

The scholastic curtailment likely will not affect the third major spring sports event—the conference golf tourney at Mt. Union on May 15—so seriously but the earlier final examination and commencement schedules will cut into entries even at that early date.

The fate of conference baseball schedules is likewise tied up with the early commencement plans of the individual colleges.

The whole outlook is so uncertain that Rudy Kutler of Kenyon, president of the conference managers' group, has called a special meeting of the managers for Sunday in Mansfield.

Discussion of the spring sports situation, of course, will raise the much more vital question—revision of the long-standing no-freshman rule to make freshmen eligible for varsity competition starting with football next fall.

One school - Ashland—already has given up the gridiron ghost and abandoned the sport for next fall.

Marietta, another school plagued by manpower shortage for football even in pre-war years will follow suit unless freshmen are made eligible.

Frank L. (Duke) Hayes, veteran Marietta coach said that the Pioneers will be unable to meet this six-game 1942 schedule under the present rules.

"I don't see any other way around it," Hayes asserted. "The conference will have to permit freshman competition if 1942 schedule commitments are to be met. I certainly shall request that the ban be lifted if the issue arises at Marshall. I did it once and I'll do it again."

The conference managers turned thumbs down on relaxation of the freshman rule at a special meeting in Mansfield midway in the last gridiron season. The question did not arise at the regular conference gathering in Columbus on Dec. 6—the day before Pearl Harbor.

* * *

If the managers should change their minds and favor playing of yearlings next fall, they must send their recommendation to the conference directors, faculty representatives who have the final say in eligibility matters.

Kenyon, a small school, is planning to continue its 1942-43 athletic program "without freshmen," Kutler said.

GOLF TOURNEY SET

SAN FRANCISCO —(INS)— Although the weather man isn't permitted to say, it looked as though fair skies would beam upon some 150 golfers tomorrow as they take the California golf club course for the opening of the San Francisco $5,000 open.

HOPPE, CHAMACO LEAD 3-CUSHION TOURNEY

CHICAGO—(INS)—Willie Hoppe of the United States and Joe Chamaco of Mexico were as close together in the world's three-cushion billiards tournament today as their respective countries are in the current international crisis.

Hoppe, the 54 year old former boy wonder of the cue, and Chamaco, the goodwill ambassador from south of the border, were heading the pack with five victories in six games, and moving steadily toward their own meeting, probably in the championship round, on Friday.

Blue Goose Plays Clipper Cagers

Blue Goose Sohioans will meet the Flxible Clippers Thursday at Loudonville in the first game of a home and home series.

The Clippers have lost only one game this season and that to the Kanner Clothes of Massillon.

Their roster is composed of Loudonville ex-Highs who last year took the Ashland county pennant. Jake Givens, six feet, three inches, and Bernard Weiss, six feet, one inch, led the Clippers.

The Sohioans will have to place a fast man on the floor depend on speed to offset the Clippers' height, they said.

Play will start at 8 p. m. in the Loudonville high school gym.

EARNING ABILITY DEPENDS ON VISION

FOUND: A MAJOR LEAGUER NOT EXPECTING RAISE

SAN FRANCISCO — (AP) — Found: A major league baseball player who—right now, at least, isn't expecting a substantial pay increase this year.

Big Ernie Lombardi, catcher for the Cincinnati Reds, admitted sadly:

"I'm kinda expecting a cut."

He batted only .263 last year after leading the National league in hitting in 1938 and batting .318 in 1940.

Wittenberg's Streak Cut

Dropped From Unbeaten Ranks; Ashland Clipped.

(By Associated Press)

Wittenberg fell from undefeated ranks of the Ohio conference basketball race last night largely because of Findlay Capt. Ken Zuercher's Garrison finish in a flashing contest at Springfield.

The Findlay forward scored all his 11 points in the last half after seeing his team slip behind 25-18 at halftime. The visitors gained a 35-all tie at the three-quarter mark and unleashed an attack which wilted the Lutherans as Zuercher sank three baskets in the final three minutes.

Wittenberg had won its three previous loop starts. Findlay's victory was its third in six conference games.

* * *

In another conference contest Ashland entertained Bowling Green only to have the visitors turn a 20-17 halftime deficit into a 42-41 victory. Center Johnson sank two baskets in closing minutes of the game to give the Beegees their second loop triumph in five starts and leave Ashland without a win this season.

* * *

Ohio university had little difficulty in beating Ohio Wesleyan at Athens, 55-35, for the Bobcats' 20th consecutive home floor win, while at Wooster the Scots disposed of Rider college of Trenton, N. J., 65-40. Tiffin swamped visiting Tiffin of Van Wert, 49-22.

Dietzel, Winbigler Each Tally 17 Points

Losers Fail To Score Basket Until Last 4 Minutes of Half

THE BLUE STREAK was shoved over on a siding last night at Sandusky while the Tyger comet roared by on a 47-26 schedule.

Mansfield high school's terrific Tygers, turning in their seventh victory in the last eight starts, left the side-tracked Streaks in the yards as they rolled along on the victory track.

The Tygers, displaying a smooth and heady brand of teamwork, turned in their best game of the season both offensively and defensively to completely bewilder their old and smaller rivals.

Not until the last four minutes of the first half did Sandusky get a basket, and the score at the quarter was 13-2 and at the half 21-7.

The Streaks never found out in that first half whether the Tygers were using a zone or man-for-man defense, so well did the shifting Mansfield man-for-man system function.

Sandusky attempts to work the ball through the Mansfield defense for short shots were stopped cold, and it wasn't until the Streaks opened up on longer heaves at the hoop in the second half that they got in the ball game.

Meanwhile the Tygers took advantage of the lack of height of three of the Streak starters to do their scoring under and close to the bucket, where Paul Dietzel and Bob Winbigler had themselves a field day with 17 points each.

* * *

Coach Vern Hoffman used every player on his squad during the debacle, and Dietzel and Winbigler were given a rest during most of the last quarter.

Ken Krupp's defensive work drew the eye of the Sandusky crowd, and many of the Streak fans declared he was the best guard seen there this winter.

Mansfield increased its halftime lead of 21-7 to 37-18 at the third period and coasted to its 47-26 victory.

The Tyger reserves were taken 30-22 in the preliminary game, Sandusky gaining a 10-6 lead at the quarter, 15-13 at the half, and 22-18 at the third quarter.

The size of the Mansfield victory in the big game left not only the Streak team but the fans bewildered. Sandusky had lost only two games, to Fremont by nine points and to Toledo Waite by a couple points, and had scored victories over Toledo Devilbiss, Elyria, Lorain and Bellevue.

Uncertain Destiny + + + + + +

CHAPTER XIV

"You say nothing is left for you but the—the river. I said one-half of my life was over, and it is. Very well, I need a stenographer. You need some place to live, a measure of security. What could be more convenient than a wedding ring?"

When Linda cried out in surprise, he said grimly, "I mean it. A strictly business proposition. I'll marry you, but only for the sake of convention. In reality we'll live separate lives at Hillsacres."

Rapidly he sketched the plan. They would be married that night, if possible, and leave for Hillsacres Farm. Here Linda would serve as his secretary for twelve months. By that time, Steve figured, the book would be completed and in the hands of publishers, and then he would make all the necessary arrangements for an immediate and secret divorce.

"It will never matter about me," Linda objected, "but what about you? What if you meet someone about whom you could care a great deal? It isn't fair for you to be tied to a—a stenographer."

"You needn't worry about me," he assured her gravely. "You love only once. In my case it was Brenda, and I'll never love again.

"Let's be practical about this. Until tonight I'll admit we were almost strangers, but you know who I am. You've heard of my family; met my sister. I have everything to gain by the agreement—my house kept in order, my book properly taken care of, and you—" He smiled. "Surely I'm a better solution to your problem than Lake Michigan. That's a coward's way out and everyone would soon know the truth. If you were married to me you would be safe and secure."

Linda's thoughts raced desperately. It was true that she needed security. In six months Greg would be back. How could she face him? Proudly, as the wife of another man, proving that his going had not ruined her life. Or would they perhaps meet one day, the remembrance of their tragic flirtation mocking her. Nothing mattered except that they must meet, with Linda the victor. Perhaps one word would change her life. One word might form her destiny—

Steve Baridon had thrust out his hand. "Will you be game, Linda? Will you give our agreement a sporting chance?"

A sporting chance? It sent a thrill down Linda's spine. A chance to defy Diane, and Greg, and all the people in Prairievale whose tongues had wagged so freely.

For a moment Linda studied the dark, serious face opposite her own, and then, bravely, she stuck out her cold, small fingers and felt his strong hand close over them, sealing a bargain.

"It's a deal," said Linda Phillips. "I'll marry you—tonight."

Afterward, Linda could remember only hazily the events leading up to her marriage to Steve Baridon. She remembered that Steve had been granted a special license; that the taxi driver had been especially adept in finding a justice of the peace and had acted as witness for the ceremony.

Even the house where they were married was hard to recall. There had been shabby, comfortable furniture and a pleasant little man to marry them, and in a surprisingly short time they were man and wife, sitting silently in a taxi cab.

"Well that's that," Steve said grimly. "Now to head for home and the music."

"I'm—frightened," Linda had said timidly, her teeth chattering.

Steve laughed, "There's no one at home, but my sister Mary. Dad is down south with his horses, and after a good night's sleep you'll feel better about the whole thing." He pressed her hand firmly. "Promise that you won't worry about this, but let me take care of everything."

"Promise."

They tiptoed in the darkened house like guilty children, and up the steps to the second floor. Here, after fumbling about in his unlighted room, Steve produced a pair of oversized pajamas which he thrust into Linda's hands, and then he showed her to a bedroom at the rear of the long hall.

"This is the guest room," he whispered hoarsely. "I'll call you early in the morning, so don't waste time thinking about the past. Get a good night's sleep."

Grateful tears welled in Linda's eyes as he left her to enter his own room, but tucked in the soft-comfortable bed, she cried silently to herself until at last, exhausted by the night's events, she slept.

The surprise marriage of Steve Baridon to what certain members of Chicago's society termed a "nobody" was to cause considerable comment. The telephone in the old Baridon mansion rang constantly the next twenty-four hours, and sitting at the cheery breakfast table that morning, Mary Baridon raved angrily about her friends.

"I don't know why all these people should be so—so snoopy," she said. "What if you two did get married suddenly? The trouble with this modern world is the lack of romance in it—"

"It's all right, Mary," Steve said smoothly. "I knew there would be talk, but we're driving out to the farm this afternoon, and by the time we come back people will have forgotten all about us in favor of some new scandal."

Linda looked at her husband gratefully. How kind he was—so unlike Greg who had, after all, thought only of himself.

Already her shyness at being taken into the Baridon family was passing. Awakening in a cheery bedroom much earlier that day, Linda had realized her new position with growing fright. The previous evening seemed like a dreadful dream; a dream from which there could be no awakening.

"Greg . . ." she had thought, agonized. "Greg—how could you be so cruel!"

Then, her eyes rested on the wide band Steve had fitted clumsily over her wedding finger. "Mrs. Stephen Baridon," she thought, confused. She had come to Chicago to be the bride of Greg Hollister. Now she was Mrs. Stephen Baridon, wife in name only to a man who had declared grimly and honestly that he would never love anyone but Brenda Coleman.

With the memory of her wedding ceremony came a realization of the many duties and obligations facing her. She had saved her face, yes, and stilled—perhaps—the gossip which might have tormented her had she returned to Prairievale. Still there would be much explaining ahead. What could she say to her parents, to her friend Sally—even to Mary?

Linda was suddenly frightened. What of Steve's father — his friends? She had forgotten in her grief that they would expect an explanation.

She dressed slowly, fastidiously, as though to put off the moment when she must certainly face the Baridons, but just as she finished her toilette someone rapped softly on the door and Steve's voice said softly, "Linda—there's something I must tell you."

Linda crossed the room in a flash, opening the door to reveal Steve holding a paper outstretched, a frown on his face.

"Is something wrong?" she queried anxiously.

Steve laughed. "It's just that we've made the papers."

Linda read the caption on an inner page: STEVEN BARIDON IN SURPRISE MARRIAGE (it read) HORSE FANCIER WED IN MIDNIGHT CEREMONY TO PRAIRIEVALE STENOGRAPHER.

The story was long and spectacular. There were pictures. Pictures of Steve, handsome in riding togs; in tails. There was even a picture taken in his college days. Too, there were pictures of Brenda Coleman in her wedding veil, with the caption: SHE JILTED SOCIETY HORSEMAN FOR MILLIONS. And tucked in a corner of the page was a small snapshot of Linda, herself, taken months before in Prairievale and obtained by the newspaper in some unexplained fashion.

All in all the story was cheap and shoddy. It misrepresented facts, facts none too clear even now to those most concerned—Linda and Steve.

"Oh, Steve, it's horrible!"

"I know. They didn't leave much to the imagination." Ruefully.

"But what shall we do? I never expected anything like this!" She wept suddenly. "Oh, Steve, I had no right to ruin your life and make you the brunt of all this scandal."

"Courage, my dear," he said gently. "You've nothing to regret. All this will be forgotten inside a week. Just don't let it lick you."

"But — Mary — your father—. How can I face them?"

"I told you that Dad is down south. I've already wired him the news, and Mary's head is so full of love's young dreams she'll think our marriage very beautiful and romantic."

"There's just one thing," he went on. "Your mother telephoned early this morning. The newspapers had called her to confirm our marriage and they gave her this address. She wanted to talk to you."

When Linda's mouth trembled, he went on quickly. "I told her we were remarkably happy and that you would write soon. Was that all right?"

Linda nodded silently, and Steve went on. "To all pretenses we are a happily wedded couple. So madly in love—love at first sight, remember—that we eloped and are leaving on a secret, extended honeymoon, so keep your chin up."

Holding fast to Steve's arm, Linda descended the wide stairs to the first floor, to find Mary Baridon awaiting them impatiently. Mary's pretty face was wreathed in smiles. Her eyes sparkled expectantly as she threw her arms around Linda's neck and kissed her warmly on the cheek.

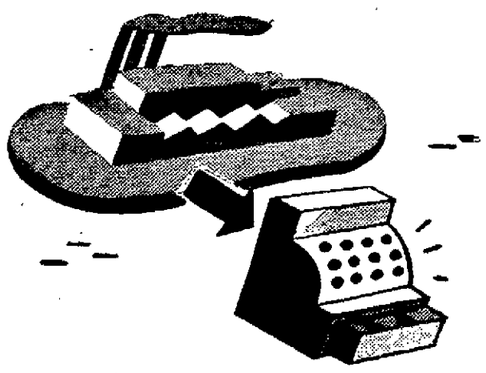
"What's in it for ME?"

"When a manufacturer plans an advertising campaign the main thing I'm interested in is: What's in it for ME? And I have some definite ideas about the kind of advertising that does me the most good."

1. "Here's how I see it: I've been running this cash register long enough to understand pretty well how advertising works ...and how newspaper advertising by the manufacturer brings in customers and rings up sales for me."

2. "From what my customers tell me, just about everybody reads the daily paper. More than that, they look for the ads in the paper and shop from them. The results I get from my own newspaper ads make me feel pretty sure of this, too."

3. "Besides, when manufacturers advertise in the local papers, they can run my name and my address in their ads. That's the kind of support that really counts...because it tells the people in this town that they can buy the advertised goods at my store."



4. "It all adds up to more business for manufacturers and for me when they reach all my prospects through advertising in the local newspapers. And what they do here they can do in every other town where they have or want distribution."

Small wonder this retailer is successful: he knows what's in it for him when newspaper advertising goes to work in his town. He knows that manufacturers produce more sales for their retailers...and themselves...when they advertise in local newspapers.

ROMANCE ENGULFS PRIVATE

CAMP CLAIBORNE, La.—(U.P.)—Amazed comrades noted that Pvt. Howard Davis of St. Louis received 100 letters and many packages in his first two months at camp. One day he got seven, all addressed in the same feminine hand. When Davis returned from his first furlough he was a married man.

TAUGHT TO SEW

LONDON—(U.P.)—Sewing classes have been started in the British army. The A. T. S. girls are taking some of them. Girls of the A. T. S., says the war office, have been giving up part of their spare time to help the men with their mending. Now the girls are teaching the men how to do their own sewing.

STOCK MARKET DROPS GROUND IN DULL TRADE

Steels and Chemicals Stage Slight Retreat; DuPont Reaches New Low.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Stocks lost a little ground today in a market devoid of animation.

Steels and chemicals were disposed to retreat and DuPont reached a new 1941-42 low. Rails, which had been able to move ahead consistenly in recent sessions, acted as though their bullish drive had been spent, at least for the present.

Lacking early buoyancy were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, United Aircraft, American Telephone, Dow Chemical, Union Carbide and Eastman. J. C. Penney was another to set a yow for the last year.

Noted by followers of industrial trends was the report of Edison Electric Institute which disclosed that energy output in the week ended Jan. 17 was slightly down from the preceding week and 14.5 per cent above the 1941 corresponding period.

BOARDS SET UP DRAFT STATIONS

3-Day Registration to Be Held In Villages, Centers In Mansfield.

days. Other volunteers, many of whom helped register the 21-to-35 group in October, 1490, have offered their services again and will be put to work, board clerks said.

The boards today were still considering the need for keeping all the registration places open Saturday and Sunday afternoons preceding the general registration on Monday, Feb. 16. Boards feel that it may be unnecessary toask the volunteers to work all three days if only a few men register the first two afternoons.

All men from 20 to 45 who have not already registered for military service will be required to register next month. In the group will be a number of veterans of the first World war 25 years ago.

School Children To Visit 'Dental Office on Wheels'

The mobile unit will carry several dentists and nurses and will be available to every school in the county at no cost, according to Dr. Wild. The dentists and nurses will also be available for lectures by organizations desiring their services.

No expense to the city-county health department will be involved by the mobile unit's visit as the department is asked to furnish nothing other than the regular school nurse to check the student records.

Until January, the unit examined only children in the first four grades in school. The senior class was added to the program when an appalling number of dental defects was revealed by government physical examination boards among the men presenting themselves as candidates for armed service.

The Mansfield Dental Clinic which provides dental service for needy students will further its own program today at a called session in the Service League room of City building. The Clinic is now considering the establishment of a dental office in the city building and will present the plan to the 32 clubs affiliated with the organization.

A sum of money was contributed to the Red Cross by the Hospital Auxiliary at its monthly meeting Monday evening, at the home of Ella Lust. The group also discussed plans for a play to be presented some time in the near future.

Mrs. J. F. Bemiller presided for business. Each third Monday of the month a sewing day is being held by the auxiliary at the hospital, when supplies are made for the institution at that time.
